Looking Backward

(M D Massie in New Canton Press)

Seventy-five years ago I stemmed tobacco in Louisiana Mo for Jacob Linder an expert German cigar maker who was ten months crossing the Atlantic on a sailing vessel He received $2 per month and boarded at home Linder made a soaked Melcigar that was said by the smokers to be superb and sold two for a picayune or 6¼c He was a Campbellite, and the sky pilot of the church worked him for all he was worth He came in often and took cigars One day he said "Brother Linder, I will take a cigar," and took a handful That was the straw that broke the camel's back Linder said "Yes I belong to his church but my cigars don't

Seventy-two years ago I attended my first wedding A noted and popular couple were married in the M E church at Louisiana and the talk of the town and the remonstrance of the old hide-bound deacons was an orchestra in church' Four young people all fine musicians made the music—violin bass viol flute and guitar The church was crowded and all enjoyed the innovation The old geezers that were 'agin the fiddle in church scolded and raved for several weeks before the storm was over

Seventy years ago McPike and Strother of Louisiana went to St Louis and had constructed twenty stout wagons or coaches for passenger caravan across the plains to California They bought eighty sets of harness and procured their horses in the two Pikes They had a medicine wagon fully equipped with the celebrated Dr Bartlett the most skillful surgeon and physician of the period in charge They had nearly a hundred passengers to start with whom they were to take through and feed and care for at a sum agreed upon the men to furnish their guns and equipment McPike and Strother did all they could to make the start satisfactory The outfit cost them with grub perhaps $8,500 and the hundred passengers had to put that and some more up Mr McPike wanted me to go along I was only twelve years old, but stout and hearty and anxious to go but my mother would not consent

The caravan started out in April and reached St Joe Mo in good order and all apparently happy But near Fort Bridger Indians attacked the train Some horses were lost five men killed and three wagons stolen They also had another raid near Fort Kearney with some loss Their troubles were augmented with much sickness and many deaths Dr Bartlett on his return said the plains were strewn with abandoned wagons bleaching bones of men and animals and all seemed desolation When the caravan reached the Truck and Humboldt rivers there were only a few left, and when they reached what is now Sacramento there were twenty men and four wagons These went into camp near Hangtown but were so worn and discouraged that nothing was accomplished McPike and Strother Dr Bartlett and three others returned home via Aspinwall and the Isthmus of Panama

Competition or Co-operation?

The Editorial Contributed to the Business Men's District Association
By Rev. C. C. Cox

In promoting the interests of West Englewood, shall we have competition or co-operation? It seems that this maxim would be far better among our merchants: "They speak encouragingly to his neighbor and everyone says to his brother, be of good cheer." This would do the following:

1. When a better feeling prevails among merchants there will be more "Home Trade."

2. Co-operation will show the merchant not to sell a substitute, but send the customer where he can obtain the thing he seeks. Every bad sale reflects on the trade of West Englewood. Better miss a sale and keep a friend than to make a sale and lose confidence and friendship.

3. Every merchant ought in every sale make a transfer of Personality as well as Property. People like to trade where there is friendship and fellowship. Get acquainted with your customers so you can call them by name Real substantial trade is built on Brotherliness and not on mere Bargains.

4. Merchants must co-operate to convince people that the store is not a convenience, but a necessity. One of the best ways to do this is to have a united effort in advertising. The Friday Bargain Sale is a great means for this. Let no merchant feel that each week he must sell more values in dollars and cents than the ad costs him. He may next week. It's worth something to get a firm's name and its goods before the public. Advertising serves the function of a life preserver; it's there to supply the need when necessity occurs.

5. Merchants, neighbors, all of you try this new phase, speak encouragingly to your merchant, doctor, druggist, and say to all, "Be of good cheer," and West Englewood will become a place of "Hearts, Homes and Home Trade."

High School Committee Waits on Mayor Thompson

A committee of parents of Lindblom pupils and prominent citizens of this community were received by Mayor Thompson and Mr Edwin S. Davis president of the Board of Education in the office of the mayor Tuesday afternoon April 6th and presented to these officials strong arguments for the creation of a playground and athletic field adjacent to our high school Chairman William H Reid Commissioner of Public Service presented the matter in a very forceful way and asked that an entire city block be obtained for this purpose so that the school children of this district and the people of this community could have proper and adequate facilities for the development of good sound bodies and for the fostering of the right sort of social spirit so necessary for the well being of our city He was enthusiastically backed by both our aldermen Messrs Byrne and Konarik who are keenly interested in the progress of Lindblom Dr McMurry presented a map of this vicinity showing the location of the desired athletic field and gave estimates of the probable cost to the Board of Education Mr Ernest Withall was the diplomat who arranged the meeting in a skillful and satisfactory manner

After hearing the statements of the committee Mayor Thompson stated that he was strongly in favor of providing this athletic field as it was in the interest of social economy and civic improvement to do so Mayor Thompson is an enthusiast on the subject of outdoor recreation and appreciates the value of such a playground in the upbuilding of good physique and character The committee was very much pleased with the genuine hearty expression of approval of their plans

President Davis then gave the committee more cause for rejoicing when he stated that the Board of Education without doubt would approve the recommendations presented and that steps would be taken to provide the field in the very near future

The committee consisted of the following Mr William H Reid chairman Alderman Thomas E Byrne Alderman James J Konarik Ernest Withall Jacob Buchmann Mrs Williams Mrs Evans Mrs Seaton Dr F McMurry Mr P Nix Mr J J McCarthy Mr G Pix Mr M Mueller Mr Keeler

Miss Mary Morgan who has been away for some time has returned to West Englewood

Our Great Recreation Spot Marquette Park

Elmer Jordan, Editor

Just imagine a space one mile long by one half mile wide right in the midst of this locality entirely devoted to recreation It is a fact that we of Marquette Manor are indeed fortunate to have such a wonderful place Marquette Park now contains one of the finest golf courses in the city containing eighteen holes and in addition we have a $100,000 golf shelter which by the way is a classic structure with beautiful architectural effects and every convenience including a directory There is a splendid children's playground The shrubbery along the drives and paths is of the best and of artistic design Some day soon the lagoon will be finished and then we shall have boating and possibly a regatta or two There are a few tennis courts now but more will soon be laid out Plans are in possession of the South Park Commissioners for the future of our great park and the next five years will see a great advance The park commissioners have stated that as rapidly as developments that they are willing to the people of this vicinity demand decently So if you have anything on your mind that you think is needed for the park, just call your local association together and make a call on the commissioners and they will gladly take the matter up and advise with you

What Happened While the Orchestra Played

The symphony orchestra had just finished the first movement of the William Tell overture From pit to dome of the large auditorium a sea of faces greeted the eye The daily concerts had grown vastly popular with the crowd that frequented the fashionable summer resort, and seldom was there a vacant seat at any performance

As the man whose leadership was famous on two continents paused for a few moments to give the full rest preceding the second part of the overture, his eyes swept the upper and lower tier of boxes expectantly His expression changed to one of disappointment as he lifted his baton, and the stringed instruments responded

For over a week he had watched for the one face that had in a single night become his inspiration—a face he had seen but once, yet had known a life time Would she return, or were they but ships that pass in the night? As though in answer to his secret longing he was suddenly aware of her presence She had entered the lower box alone

The soft folds of her black evening gown brought out the whiteness of her neck and shoulders, like the setting of old ivory in somber surroundings Her red gold hair exquisitely assumed burnished tints and her profile was as clear as a cameo. She wore no jewels save a single strand of pearls

As the wonderful harmony of the violins floated up and around her, she looked across the space that divided his heart from hers. It was as though a signal flashed between them, and she answered it in every fibre of her body and soul Throughout her life music had been her ruling passion and in the man before her who embodied its spirit she realized a bond of sympathy and understanding never before experienced She was fascinated and was happy in her fascination. Their eyes met lingered and questioned Before her vision all the other faces faded

As the soul of the violins gave out the mating call of spring, a call of human longing surged up in her And when the melody burst into passionate sadness, the overwhelming question thrilled through the heart of the listening woman

Did he know could he know—even instinctively—the unhappiness of her past a period extending over the years of her married life, a marriage of convenience

Suddenly she took a small pad from the jeweled bag on her arm, and with a trembling pencil quickly wrote a request for his favorite song and calling an usher aside asked him to see that it was given the musician

She closed her eyes and waited, while her lips trembled—and between them in the hushed building broken only by the melody of the song as it neared its close passed something sweet and fleeting like a silent caress Forgotten was the past she was conscious only of the present and the new promise of the future The strains of the song that meant so much to her floated out into the great auditorium

Oh memories that bless and burn,
Oh barren gain and bitter loss, "

And then, suddenly, as a finely strung bow may give way, she felt her heart strain, contract, and fight to regain its measured beat The room faded out in the distance He seemed but a tiny speck in the cloud that floated before her eyes A feeling of lassitude and depression followed She tried to summon her will power, to hold her poise but the pain in her heart brought on a panic of fear She had overlooked the doctor's warning that she was still weak from her recent illness

It was the air she wanted, of course A little shower of white beads fell to her lap and rolled to the floor Her strand of pearls had broken—and pearls were for tears She stooped to pick one from the folds of her gown, and felt herself falling; down, down into endless space Like the sigh of a broken heart the last notes of The Rosary died away. The director raised his eyes to her for whom he had played A horrified moment of suspense and he had bridged the space that separated the box from the stage.

The audience was dumbfounded. Such a thing had never been witnessed in a fashionable playhouse before, but the orchestra was continuing its program under the direction of an assistant, so they remained in their seats; and waited

From the rear of the Auditorium a doctor hastily entered the box. After a glance he threw up his hands in helpless fashion The woman with the red gold hair rested in the arms of the man whose music thousands of people had come to hear Slowly her eyes opened, and a look of triumph and peace passed over her countenance Quickly the expression became radiant with that light which dawns upon the face of a woman when she looks into the eyes of the man she loves—a light that lies not upon land or sea

"The hours I've spent with thee, dear heart," she whispered

"My darling" he replied brokenly.

With a feeble effort she lifted her hand to his face "To kiss the Cross, sweetheart, to kiss the Cross," she said simply, and smiled. The Music Master staggered aside.

"Her name?" inquired a pompous official

"I do not know," he answered hopelessly, while great sobs shook his frame, and those who heard, thought him dazed with grief.

But what mattered her name to him, since the rose itself had bloomed and gone?

Englewood Theatre "Tempters"

"Tempters" are coming to town. They're going to make 'em sit up and take notice at the Englewood Theatre next Sunday, April 18th. No advance in prices; but there should be, because the "Tempters" is the biggest, classiest, snappiest, speediest burlesque show that ever cut up capers or kicked a leg in these parts.

With an all star company of headline funsters and a chorus of twenty dainty, dashing, dazzling, bewitching "Broadway Broilers" it has anything in the way of burlesque faded off the map. Its book, or as they say on Broadway, "theme," is the funniest ever, its music is of that rythmic, rollicking, raggy kind that sets you humming and starts your feet a-going and its numbers are so startlingly and sensationally spectacular that they beggar description and will take your breath away. Manager Chas. Baker has outdone and outshone all of his previous attempts to such an extent that the "Tempters" marks a new era in burlesque.

The nation has been dried and found wanting.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Suffragists are getting a much clearer idea of Washington's difficulty crossing the Delaware.—Philadelphia North American.

These are the days when presidential candidates are more likely to be candied than candid.—Boston Shoe and Leather Reporter.

While officials talk much of a heavier tax, the voter is quietly grunting his ay.—Brooklyn Eagle.

National Theatre "Mary's Ankle"

There will be plenty of laughter at the National Theatre next week when Mary's Ankle with real live people playing the parts will be presented by the National Theatre company starting on Sunday afternoon

Giving three ambitious young men who have chosen their respective vocations in life that of a doctor, a lawyer and a financier who at the opening of this most delightful comedy have about 'steen cents between them With the doctor treating his landlady for her imaginary ills thereby getting his room rent free and even sneaking in his pals to bunk with him A landlady who has every known symptom for every known disease she has a growing daughter who is made to do all the work running the place and speaks her mind about it just as she thinks Also the inevitable parrot that completes such a household, and there we have the basis for the plot of Mary's Ankle

Though Mary and the doctor are strangers almost the much rushes down and engages the hotel chambering the trip to Bermuda as a wedding present He meets his old sweetheart who is Mary's aunt and the tangle gets worse

Of course, through all the doctor's trouble his two friends try to help—but don't The landlady, her daughter, who refuses to be hushed and the parrot figure prominently, as do the uncle the aunt and the deck steward A clever plot bright lines and very natural production will make you remember Mary's Ankle

Mr Bryan has just rounded sixty, but obviously he has not entered upon his declining years Columbia Record

Washing Machines and Vacuum Cleaners of All Kinds Simplex Mangles

Makes Every Minute Count On Washday

Did it ever occur to you how neatly the Electric Washing Machine fits into this plan—how it saves time and conserves energy?

To the housewife who does her own washing, an A B C Super Electric Washing Machine will save three to six hours per week. For the sake of illustration, let us say four; this means a total of 208 hours a year—26 working days of 8 hours each—four and a third weeks in all—that might well be spent to better advantage than drudgery over the washtub.

And by this elimination of drudgery, her health is safeguarded.

To the housewife who has her regular weekly laundress, this expense can easily be eliminated, effecting a saving of approximately $150.00 per year—more than the cost of the machine. Or if she prefers to retain her laundress, most of the latter's time can be diverted to scrubbing, cleaning, ironing and other of the more arduous household tasks.

But the Electric Washing Machine does more than conserve time, energy and money. It saves the clothes. It does away with the wear and tear of the washboard.

Thousands of household economists everywhere are taking the drudgery out of washday by means of the A B C Super Electric Washing Machine. They know from experience.

The spirit of times decrees an Electric Washing Machine for every household.
